■ Manager commentary

April saw a reversal of several of the big trends in markets of the past twelve months. The US dollar fell, the euro recovered sharply, commodity prices bounced (led by a rising oil price) and emerging markets outperformed developed markets significantly (led by China). Perhaps most significantly there was a steep reversal in the trend of falling government bond yields, especially in Europe, where yields had fallen to all-time lows. From mid-April, when German 10-year Bund yields reached a low of 0.07%, yields increased almost ten-fold by early May, to reach 0.55%, and in peripheral Europe yields moved up by around 0.7-0.8% in two to three weeks. In general data releases from Europe over the month showed an improving trend, albeit from a low base, and economic forecasts have been pushing higher. Conversely recent data out of the US has been disappointing versus expectations, providing greater evidence that the economy is in a growth pause, with recent strength in the US dollar certainly being a contributing factor.

Against this background, equity markets performed better than bonds, and emerging markets better than developed markets. The MSCI World index gained 2.3% in US dollar terms, led by Asia, Japan and the UK, whereas Europe was down slightly after a very strong run this year. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index was up 7.7% in the month, led by a sharp rise in the China / Hong Kong markets that appeared to be driven more by speculation and the new 'Shanghai-Hong Kong Stock Connect' plan rather than by fundamentals. In contrast government bond markets were generally down in local currency terms, although currency moves pushed returns in US dollar terms into positive territory with the Citigroup global aggregate index gaining 1.0%. High yield, emerging market and convertible bond indices provided slightly better returns. On currency moves, the US dollar index fell almost 4% representing its first month-on-month decline in over a year, and the largest monthly fall since 2011. Meanwhile the oil price rose 21.2%, taking prices back to levels of early December last year and prompting a reappraisal of the extent of deflationary pressures in the developed world.

In April the Harmony US Dollar Growth Fund returned 2.4% net of all fees in US dollar terms. This strong performance was driven largely by our asset allocation positioning. Our holdings in equity, emerging market assets and credit all performed well over the month, while the Fund had no exposure to developed market sovereign bonds which performed poorly. The best performing holdings in the portfolio included the Kopernik Global Equity fund (+13.8%), the Dimensional Emerging Markets fund (+9.2%) and the RWC Asia Convertibles fund (+9.4%). Given such strong performance in a short period, we elected to take some profits from our emerging market equity and Asia convertible bond holdings towards the end of the month. As a result, we marginally increased the Fund's cash holding. Emerging market equity and Asian convertibles remain well represented in the portfolio, but both have been moved to slightly lower allocations in recognition of higher valuation levels. We have also sold the remaining exposure to the Old Mutual Strategic Bond fund, after the manager announced his impending departure, and initiated a small holding in the Westwood Global Convertible bond fund, in part driven by a desire to increase manager diversification within our convertible bond allocations.
