■ Market commentary

Concerns over a Greek exit from the Eurozone, softer data from the US and the easing pace of Chinese growth combined to push asset prices down in May. Global equities fell by 8.6% in US dollar terms last month, eroding year to date gains and wiping USD 2.6 trillion off the value of global stocks. In contrast, the price of core developed market government bonds reached historic highs, as investors sought safety in perceived high-quality fixed income securities. As a result, the 12 month trailing dividend yield on the S&P 500 Index is now higher than the yield on 10 year US Treasuries for only the second time since the 1950s. Conditions in Europe may prompt a new round of intervention from policymakers, with more integration as opposed to less still the order of the day despite Germany's continued opposition to joint-liability bonds (eurobonds). The failure of parties to form a coalition government in Greece means that voters will return to the polls on 17 June. The contagion resulting from a disorderly Greek exit from the Eurozone would have wide ramifications, not least in Spain, which is on the verge of a bailout from the European Union as at the time of writing. US payroll data has consistently disappointed economists' forecasts since March, with the private sector adding a mere 69,000 jobs in May. China's official Purchasing Managers Index fell more than expected last month, in keeping with a mixed set of economic releases from the People's Republic. The central bank cut interest rates by 25 basis points to 6.31% post the end of the month, suggestive of Beijing's concerns over the strength of the recovery.

The Harmony USD Balanced fund underperformed its benchmark in May with a return of -3.9% (net of all fees) compared to -2.9% for the reference composite. With the return of anxieties over the outlook for global growth, the performance of asset classes was consistent with generally risk averse behaviour by investors. As a result, the current asset allocation policy in the fund added value but also detracted. The fund remains broadly neutral to underweight equity markets following changes made in the early days of April. The fund is underweight sovereign paper which was a beneficiary of investor flows thanks to its status as a perceived safe haven asset, a view we would question at current valuations. This underweight to government paper was, therefore, the main contributor to underperformance in May. The fund's overweight to credit preserved capital better than the equity market, but fared less well than core government securities. Overall, the Harmony USD Balanced fund is positioned for a low (but positive) growth environment, and under these conditions the portfolio's underweight to government debt is expected to benefit performance through the cycle. In the short term, however, when markets are impacted by a degree of risk aversion, this positioning will not aid relative performance. Within the fixed income portion of the portfolio use is made of strategic, investment grade, convertible and high yield mandates. From a manager selection perspective the Morgan Stanley Global Brands fund declined by 8.1% in May in US dollar terms, marginally outperforming the global equity benchmark. The manager's strategy of only investing in the very highest quality businesses, with top holdings including Nestle, British American Tobacco and Reckitt Benckiser, usually leads to significant outperformance in down markets. Indeed, this has been the case over the past twelve months, with the fund contributing significant outperformance as a result of their overweight allocation to the consumer staples sector. May, however, proved to be a difficult month, as stocks sold off uniformly irrespective of their relative quality.
