■ Market commentary

The sharp selloff in markets in May continued into the early days of June, with the market's attention firmly focussed on the debt problems in the Eurozone and growing evidence of a slowdown in the key economies of the US and China. Spain finally succumbed to an inevitable bailout request at the start of the month, asking the Eurozone for EUR 100 billion of funding to support its ailing banking system. While the acceptance of the need for help and the Eurozone's agreement to assist initially calmed markets, investors took fright when the terms of the support left many questions unanswered. Sentiment began to improve ahead of the Greek elections on 17 June, as fears over a socialist party (Syriza) victory began to recede. The centre right party duly won sufficient support to form a coalition government, thereby avoiding the immediate risk of a disorderly exit and default. Markets gradually began to recover some poise ahead of the meeting of European leaders at the end of June, although expectations for any substantive progress towards a long term solution to the crisis remained low. In the event the summit produced a dramatic surprise, with Germany agreeing to some modest growth initiatives and, more importantly, to direct bailouts of Eurozone banks from European funds in return for more centralised supervision of the sector. The result was an immediate surge in markets as sentiment improved amid hopes that Europe was gradually moving towards greater integration and an enhanced fiscal union. The MSCI World index rose by 2.4% in local currency terms in a single day, its biggest move of the year, with many European markets rallying by over 5% in their respective currencies. The markets are now at an interesting juncture. On the one hand the Eurozone crisis has appeared to ease in the near term, and progress is underway towards closer Eurozone integration. Yet on the other hand economies have slowed and there is little to suggest that they will bounce back to higher growth levels. These competing forces are likely to result in continuing volatility in markets in the months ahead, with periods of decent growth punctured by periodic setbacks.

The Harmony USD Balanced fund returned 1.5%, net of all fees, in June. Asset allocation benefitted performance over the month, with the neutral position to equity markets complemented well by the fund's underweight exposure to sovereign paper and overweight to credit. Overall, the Harmony USD Balanced fund is positioned for a low (but positive) growth environment, and under these conditions the portfolio's underweight to government debt is expected to benefit performance through the cycle. In the short term, however, when markets are impacted by a degree of risk aversion, this positioning may lead to the fund's underperforming its benchmark. Within the fixed income portion of the portfolio use is made of strategic, investment grade, convertible and high yield mandates. Some relatively small mid month changes were made to the allocation of the fund, including the initiation of a position in inflation protected government bonds and a small reduction of the global property securities holding to underweight, on the basis that this asset class has significantly outperformed the broader equity market year to date. From a manager selection perspective, the Momentum IF Global Equity fund rose by 4.6% in US dollar terms last month, underperforming its benchmark. In aggregate, the fund's deep value component was the main contributor to performance, with both managers outperforming the index last month, whilst the quality-value blend was broadly in line with the benchmark. The fund's aggressive growth component struggled, however, as all three managers underperformed the benchmark. This was driven by an overweight allocation to the IT sector in the case of the global manager, and by stock selection within the consumer discretionary and IT sectors for the US small cap managers.

As with November last year, in June the fund's relative performance was impacted by the difference between the time that this fund's price is calculated and the time that the prices of the underlying funds are published. As a result, many of the equity holdings are priced to the 28th of June, meaning that the fund's performance may not fully reflect the final day's significant equity market rally. This effect should be reversed next month. In June the fund's benchmark, which is not affected by this timing issue, returned 2.3%.
