■ Manager commentary

For the first time this year, the Greek crisis slipped out of the headlines in July, but not before the Syriza government had made major concessions to its EU and IMF creditors, and accepted extremely tough terms to allow negotiations on a third bailout to begin. With Greece out of the spotlight, investors focused on events in China, where the economy appears to be slowing more rapidly than the authorities would like. Exacerbating the situation has been the boom and bust in the Chinese stock market, which had doubled in 12 months, but has recently seen a sharp correction. After a brief rally in the first half of July, triggered by extraordinary intervention by the Chinese authorities, market forces took over again towards the end of the month, and Chinese stocks continued their decline. Moreover, as China is an important consumer of commodities, the weakness of its economic activity is starting to weigh on resource prices globally, with the recent fall in oil prices being the most notable and important. Brent crude has fallen below US$50 per barrel once again, with concerns about China as well as increased supply from US shale driving the decline.

Against this backdrop, equity and bond indices posted gains across most developed markets, whereas equities underperformed sharply in emerging markets. In local currency terms, Europe-ex-UK and Australian equity markets led the way with returns of 4.6% and 4.3%, while indices in the UK and US posted more modest returns of 2.5% and 2.1%, respectively. Overall the MSCI World index gained 2.4% in local currency terms, or 1.8% in US dollar terms. In contrast emerging market equities fell 4.7% in local terms, or 6.9% in US dollar terms. Commodities delivered even larger declines, with oil and gold in particular falling 17.9% and 6.5% respectively. Meanwhile, the major government bond markets saw gains ranging from 1.0% in the case of US Treasuries, to 2.3% for the European market. Credit markets had mixed outcomes relative to local sovereigns, with global convertible bonds (+0.2%) and US high yield (-0.6%) being some of the more notable laggards. The US dollar strengthened over the month, gaining over 2% on a trade weighted basis.

In July, the Harmony US Dollar Growth Fund fell 0.2% in US dollar terms, reducing the year to date return to 0.1%. Many of our asset allocation and manager selection decisions have been rewarded this year, but that was not the case this past month. Equity manager selection was among the leading detractors from performance, as most of the Fund's US-focused equity managers underperformed the S&P 500. Active managers have struggled versus benchmarks in the US over the last few months, but that is not unusual during periods when a relatively small number of stocks (particularly higher growth/more expensive stocks) are driving most of the gains. This has benefited our growth orientated managers, but has caused our value orientated managers to lag the market. In the long run we expect all of these managers to deliver outperformance versus the US market, but they should each achieve this in different market environments and there will inevitably be periods of aggregate underperformance like this.
