■ Market commentary

Politics took centre stage last month, beginning with the US elections on 6 November. Polls leading up to the event put President Obama firmly ahead in the key 'swing' states, and in the end he claimed a comfortable victory over Republican challenger Mitt Romney. Democrat presidencies are generally considered to be less 'business friendly', and markets duly opened down the day after the elections, with the S&P 500 index falling by 2.4%. Attention has subsequently shifted to US fiscal policy, with time running out for a last minute deal to avert the 'fiscal cliff'. The term, coined by Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke back in February, refers to automatic measures to reduce the government's budget deficit that were made legally-binding under the Budget Control Act of 2011. US lawmakers are now seeking to agree new legislation to reduce the impact of these automatic measures, which threaten to cut circa 3% from US real GDP next year. On the data front, the latest releases out of the US continue to be distorted by last month's tropical storm Sandy, which makes gauging the current health of the economy difficult. Post the end of the month, the Institute for Supply Management's survey showed the US manufacturing sector dipping once more into contractionary territory, whilst global measures of activity remain depressed. With one month to go in 2012, few would have foreseen the types of returns delivered by many asset classes thus far, with most equity markets recording double digit returns, alongside strong gains for credit and high yield bonds. Returns have been set against a relatively benign inflation backdrop, with expectations for price growth going forwards still relatively well-anchored, despite the extraordinary levels of central bank money printing.

November was very much a month of two halves for global equities. The first couple of weeks saw markets fall by close to five percent, but the subsequent rally was sufficient to lift the global aggregate into positive territory for the month, up by 1.3% in US dollar terms. Against this backdrop, the Harmony US Dollar Balanced fund managed to deliver its fifth positive month out of the past six. The fund returned 0.6% in US dollar terms over the period. From an asset allocation perspective, the fund's underweight to global government bonds and overweight allocation to areas of the credit markets benefited absolute performance. The fund's holdings in investment grade and high yield credit, as well as the allocation to strategic bond mandates and convertible debt, provided positive returns. The fund's underweight to global property securities had a negative impact on relative returns, as these assets outperformed other areas of the equity markets. The fund remains underweight to government bonds, as we do not see compelling valuations available in this area of the fixed income markets. Indeed, barring significant global shocks the upside from sovereign debt is anticipated to be muted, making the risk-return trade off unattractive in anything but a significant 'double dip' scenario. In the event of a more moderate outcome, including gentle global GDP growth in coming years, we expect government bonds to underperform other asset classes.

From a manager selection perspective, the RWC Global Convertibles fund posted a modest return of 0.3% in November. This compares to a gain of 1.3% for global equities and 'no change' for the Citigroup WorldBIG bond index, with convertible bonds generally considered to be positioned somewhere between these two asset classes. Year to date the fund has added 6.0%, capturing a little under half of the return of global equities; whilst this is a lower upside participation rate than the managers would expect, it has nonetheless been achieved with considerably lower volatility. The fund maintains an overweight allocation to the US balanced by an underweight allocation to Europe, on the basis that the former offers the more compelling risk/reward dynamics at present. The manager has recently observed an improvement in Asia's fundamentals, and believes that economic data may have reached a floor from which it will begin to turn marginally more positive.
