■ Manager commentary

The Harmony Europe Diversified fund rose 0.7% in November in euro terms net of fees and has gained 1.0% year to date. Although European equities were broadly flat over the month, euro currency weakness versus the US dollar and sterling boosted returns for the Fund's international holdings, and fund performance was further supported by our asset allocation policy within fixed income and manager selection within equities. The fixed income portion of the Fund is predominantly invested across various segments of the corporate bond markets. In all cases our selected holdings outperformed the -1.3% return of the global government bond index, even achieving positive returns in the case of our convertible and US high yield holdings, despite a challenging backdrop of steepening yield curves. The only fixed income holding outside of corporate bonds is in hard currency emerging market bonds, which returned -1.3% over the month. However the impact of this was reduced by virtue of our decision at the start of the month to switch some of this exposure into the Muzinich Emerging Market Corporate Bond strategy, which only fell 0.7% over the month. Within equities, several of the Fund's selected managers outperformed relative to their respective benchmarks, including Jupiter in Europe and the global strategies managed by Artisan and American Century. But it was the Fund's Schroder Recovery strategy holding, which primarily invests in undervalued equities listed in the UK and represents a near 4% allocation, that proved to be the best performing holding in November with a return of 7.4%.

Three new holdings were added to the Fund during November: two liquid alternatives funds and a position in gold. We believe adding these liquid alternatives and gold holdings will enhance both the risk and return profiles of the Harmony funds.

We now have small positions across three liquid alternative funds, in order to benefit from a well-diversified blend of alternative strategies. The current allocation of 6% may increase from here if we identify other funds to invest in, but the overall sizing will depend on valuations in other asset classes and is unlikely to exceed 10%. Two of the strategies, managed by F&C and Goldman Sachs, focus on systematically harnessing style risk premia within equity markets. These are additional premia observed for taking on particular equity risk over and above what you would expect from the market as a whole and the idiosyncratic risk inherent within each individual stock. The third fund, managed by Goldman Sachs Asset Management (GSAM) is a macro orientated strategy which is diversified across several underlying sleeves with different return drivers including interest rates, emerging market debt, currencies and mortgages. The sleeves are managed by specialist teams and are combined according to a robust and disciplined investment and risk management process. All three of these funds are managed to provide a market neutral exposure, meaning returns have very little sensitivity to equity and credit markets.

We introduced a small position in physical gold bullion via an exchange traded security managed by ETF Securities. Units held in this security are fully backed by physical gold holdings. We do not forecast an expected return for the gold price in the same way that we do for other asset classes, in large part due to it not producing any form of yield, but history provides a very good guide as to how the gold price performs in different environments. In particular gold tends to deliver strong returns during periods of sharp equity market drawdowns and high inflation. Given the bulk of the funds will remain invested in equity markets, these characteristics of gold complement that exposure well and help to make the funds more robust and well balanced. Also, although the world has faced strong deflationary forces in recent years, a return to inflation should not be ruled out and gold has a proven ability to preserve purchasing power over the very long term.
