■ Manager commentary

We increased our small position in put options on the S&P 500 during June, after purchasing a similar amount the previous month. The new options will expire one month later at the end of November and have a higher strike level; on both occasions we purchased at-the-money options with approximately six months to expiry. The pay-outs at maturity will be based on the level of the S&P 500 index relative to when we purchased the options. If the index is lower at the expiry date then the pay-out will be positive, otherwise the options will expire worthless. We have taken these positions on the basis that put options offer cheap protection at a time when markets generally appear somewhat complacent, partly evidenced by very low implied volatility (which itself results in option prices being much lower than usual). We believe the current bull market in equities has further to run and so do not intend to reduce our equity holdings, but we would not be surprised to see markets experience a correction before too long. Furthermore, US equity market valuations are relatively high and the S&P 500 options market is one of the most liquid in the world; additional factors that make this an appealing, low-cost protection strategy.

We also increased our weighting in the Ferox Chinook Global Convertible Bond holding, which was first initiated during May. This was funded from the Portfolio's other convertible bond holdings thereby leaving the overall asset allocation unchanged.
